Traveling to Geneva

By Air

Cointrin International Airport, Geneva's airport and the second-largest international airport in Switzerland, is served by several airlines that fly directly to the city from New York, Toronto, and London.

Swissair serves the airport most frequently. Most of the long haul international flights fly to Zurich International Airport, but a Swissair shuttle flight (Pendolino) assures the connection between the two airports every hour.

From the airport to the city

By Bus

There is regular bus service from the airport to the center of Geneva. The bus takes about 20 minutes, and the fare is 2.20 SF. Some of the city's hotels also have their own shuttle system.

By Taxi

Taxis are plentiful but very expensive, charging at least 25 SF to the city center. Tips are expected for luggage only.

By Train

Cointrin has a direct rail link with Cornavin (Geneva's train station), in the center of town. Trains run about every 10 minutes from 5:30 AM to midnight. The trip takes about six minutes, and the fare is 5 SF.

Business hours & holidays

Businesses close for lunch in Switzerland, though this is changing, especially in larger cities like Geneva. All remain closed on Sunday, and many stay closed through Monday morning as well. Stores are open on weekdays from 9.00 AM to 6.45 PM.

Banks are open weekdays from 8:30 to 4:30. Museums generally close on Monday. Many stores stay open late on Thursday. Stores in train stations often remain open to 9 PM; in the Geneva airport, shops are open on Sunday.
